The special committee appointed under resolution passed by council July 8th, to recommend a system of keeping borough accounts, beg leave to report that after carefully considering the subject, we have agreed as follows:

1st. That all bills presented to council for payment should be numbered by the Finance Committee consecutively. After orders have been granted, the Clerk of Council will thereupon issue an order for the amount of each bill numbered to correspond with the number on the bill and after having delivered the orders to the parties entitled thereto, he will turn over to the Borough Treasurer, all bills for which orders have been issued. The Treasurer must not eash any order until he has the original bill passed by council, in his possession, properly numbered to correspond with the order number. Havthe same on the original bill.

About this time George Prosser, an enhusiastic bleyeler, made his appearance with his wheel, and despite his heroic efforts to get out of the road was cornered and compelled to abancion the wheel and take to his beels. By this time the field was cleared and the bull made a break for one side of the fence and broke through. The animal then ran through the west end of the town, injured a young boy, John Mortimer, upset an ice cream stand, collided with a number of buildings and fences to his sorrow and finally dropped dead in front of the Haws Avenue Methodist Church.

After the bull had left the ball field the game was resumed and the local team defeated by a score of 9 to 7.

Farmers, what you want is that the laborer has steady work at good wages; if he makes full time he makes a full market: if he makes half time his purchasing power is decreased one-half and you suffer with him. The trouble is caused by the erime of '92-"tariff reform and free raw materials." We were promised things cheap; aint 60 cent meat cheap enough. We were promised the markets of the world. These markets were a'ready supplied with goods manufactured by the low priced labor of Europe, and to enter them we would have to undersell the goods already there; to do that we would have to reduce the wages in this country to a par with the wages paid in the countries we were competing with. What has been the result? We have destroyed our own market in striving for a foreign one. The old fable of the dog and the bone over again Europe congratulated herself on being able to enter our markets by the aid of the Wilson bill but what did they find; a people whose purchasing power to a great extent had been destroyed; a people whose employment in manufacturing the goods that they wished to ship us had created the market. Our manufacturers to compete with the foreign goods had to reduce wages and employ low priced foreign labor, bringing our people to a grub basis, requiring all they made to keep body and soul together. If we import a million dollars worth of goods, the laborers that are employed in making them are fed on wheat raised in Officers Kirkpatrick and Elder of the Russia and India. And off in the southern corner, it the foot of a great pine tree, there is a nound that recalls a tragedy of a year ion: "Thomas Hovenden. Born Dec. 28, 1840. Died Aug. 14, 1895."

When the split occurred in the denomination, the Orthodox Friends built a new meeting house just south-east of the older structure, the latter being retained by the pike, upon the property of the meeting, here is also a school house, where for a ong time a private school was maintained by the Plymouth Friends. Gradually a thriving village has developed about Plymouth Meeting. In 1804 the Germantown turnpike was constructed upon the bed of a cart road that had structed, passing through Plymouth Mr. Dakin, proprietor of the Brook- Meeting. When the recent dissensions arose in arrest of Jones and Harris, they were the Evangelical church, almost the entire congregation adhered to Bishop Dubs. In consequence of the legal decisions in the matter, the church property at Plymouth like many others, passed into the hands of Bishop Bowman's followers. The Plymouth congregation for a time then held services in Cold Point hall. Finally, however the church was purchased for $1000, and services were resumed there, the name, Plymouth United Evangelical church, being adopted. Thus, after many reverses, prosperity once more greets the congregation. The various services are well attended, and an active interest is manifested in all the exreises. Miss Beulah Trego is the orcanist, and the congregational singing is of an especially spirited character. The pastor of the church is Rev. W. L. Teel, who assumed charge several months ago.

FRIDAY, AUGUST 14, 1896

On March 17, 1896, the Hon. William Jennings Bryan declared at Mount Vernon, Ill.: "I am not a Democrat."

Eschbach, of Upper Hanover: Populist platform? [N. Y. Sun.

A movement is being pushed by the tarmers to lower the salaries of all the county and state officials. The movement is right, and has the merit of non-partisanship. Salaries that are higher than men of sufficient ability to hold the office can earn outside of them are unjust to the taxpayers and promote corruption in politics. A reduction in salaries to accord with the times would cut many of them in two. What sense is there in taxing people to pay a man twice as much to hold an office as he would be glad to accept if obliged to hustle for a living? This movement is a real reform.-Lansdale Reporter.

The primary meetings of the Republican party on Saturday evening should be attended by every Republi can voter in the borough. At these meetings not only should delegates be elected to represent the different wards in the convention, but the voters should also indicate their views regarding the platform the party should adopt. Do we wish Cameron re-elected, favor free silver, or the restriction of immigration? If so it should be indicated at the primaries and the delegates elected instructed to do all that is possible to so impress the convention. Do not allow the platform to be made by one man at the convention. Have a hand in the making of it yourself.

Large Offices and Lightning. A curious fact connected with deaths by lightning has recently been noticed in Europe, It appears that, as compared with the country, towns, and especially cities, possess remarkable immunity from lightning strokes. The J. Rufus Barr. W. Conshohocken statistics which have been compiled on the subject show that between 1800 and 1851 there was not a single death by lightning recorded in Paris, and that only one person out of each million that dies in London is taken off by a discharge from nature's electrical battery! Between 1851 and 1895 only three persons were struck by lightning in Paris, and only one of these three cases resulted fatally. In Berlin only five persons have been struck by lightning

On account of the great elevation of the water and the pressure obtainab it is possible to operate the plant with cant. The source of supply, says the Chicago Record, is among the mou tains of Madera county, 40 miles from Sexton, of Lower Gwynedd; William Fresno, in an air line, but more than DeHaven, of Linfield; Richard D. 50 by the road. The north fork of the San Joaquin river has its numero heiser, of Pottstown; Morris R. Peter- to 12,000 feet high. The streams flow through rocky channels till they uni and form the north fork. At an eleva Potts, of Upper Merion; Frank A. tion of 2,000 feet the water is taker Comly, of Ambler; and B. Witman from the channel by a canal, which for some distance is cut in solid rock along the mountain side, and at other place For Prothonotary the list includes is carried by flumes till it reaches a region less rugged. From there it cor tinues several miles to the summit of mountain which juts out as a bold promontory over the main San Joaquin river more than 1,400 feet away.

The reservoir on the summit of the quires it. As it is now it contains sufficient water to drive the machinery of the present installation 30 days. Should the reservoir embankment give way 400-HORSE POWER WATER WHEEL, the machinery need not be stopped. A canal leads around the reservoir and connects directly with the pipe down the mountain, and the reservoir can be dispensed with if necessary.

It is in the line of pipe which conveys the water from the reservoir to the power house at the foot of the moun-tain, rather than in the canal and res-ervoir, that the chief interest lies. Large pipes are met with often, but they are small, compared with this one, car rying water from a precipice 1,410 feet in perpendicular height. It must be of stronger construction than any boil-

The steel in the pipe is one-fourth of an inch thick at the upper end, gradually increasing until it reaches the bot-tom, where it is seven-eighths of an inch. The pressure at the receiver is 610 pounds to the square inch, exceeding several times the pressure considered dangerous in a steam boiler. At the top the pipe is 24 inches in diame ter, but as water runs faster under greater pressure, the pipe gradually decreases, until at the receiver it is only 20 inches. Immense wire cables anchor the pipe to the solid rock of the mountain so it cannot slip. After the 1,800 feet of pipe were completed it was necessary to paint the in side, and the only way to do this wan to send a man through it. A San Francisco boilermaker finally assumed the work. A sled was made that would pass through the pipe from the top. It was loaded with paint, brushes, water, food and candles and prepared with roasting heat made in the pipe by the sun's beams on the metal.

The power house at the foot of the mountain is built of granite. Here are placed the wheels and dynamos At the lower end of the pipe is the arge steel receiver, out of which project the nozzles that furnish water for the wheels. The nozzles are of deflect-ing pattern, with about one inch orifice, and are made of phosphor bronze. The nozzle is fastened into the receiver by a bail-and-socket joint, and is so arranged by means of a differential governor that when the waterwheel reres, Ulcers, Salt Rheum, Fever Sores, Tetter. volves too rapidly the nozzle is deflectwheel.

The waterwheels are very strong, but very light. Their general appearance | Subject to Republican Rules. is that of heavy circular saws, with large cup-like disks. These disks or buckets are close together, and made of phosphor bronze. The wheels revolve 600 times a minute.

There is not a cog nor a belt in the power house, and, except the roar of ware River Bridge route, overcome this water on the wheels, scarcely a sound objectionable feature and furnish an opwater on the wheels, scarcely a sound portunity for a day's pleasure by the sea ary adjusted. Each dynamo develops 400 horse-power. Space is provided for additional dynamos when needed, but twice the power needed in Fresno at subject to Republican Rules.

CHAPTER VI. "Tell me what has happened," repeated John Kenyon. Wentworth looked up at him. "Everything has happened," he answered. "What do you mean, George? Are you ill? What is the matter with you?" "I am worse than ill, John; a great leal worse than ill. I wish I were ill." "That wouldn't help things, whatever is wrong. Come, wake up. Tell me what the trouble is." "John, I am a fool-an ass-a gibberng idiot."

'Admitting that-what then?" "I trusted a woman-imbecile that i am; and now-now-I'm what you see

"Has—has Miss Brewster anything to do with it?" asked Kenyon, suspi-"She has everything to do with it."

"Has she—rejected you, George?"
"What! that girl? Oh, you're the idiot now. Do you think I would ask "I cannot be blamed for jumping at conclusions. You must remember 'that girl,' as you call her, has had most of your company during this voyage; and most of your good words when you were mnot with her. What is the matter?

What has she to do with your trouble?" Wentworth paced up and down the "Have parrow limits of the state-room as if at all?" he were caged. He smote his hand against his thigh, while Kenyon looked

"Pull yourself together," he said. little fresh air will do you good."

They made their way to the deck, and linking arms walked up and down. For a long time Wentworth said nothing, and Kenyon had the tact to hold his peace. Suddenly Wentworth noticed that they were pacing back and forth in front of Miss Brewster, so he continued his walk around to the other side of the ship. After a few turns up and down, he said: "You remember Rivers, "Certainly,"

"He was employed on that vile sheet, the New York Argus."

"I suppose it is a vile sheet. I don't remember ever seeing it. Yes, I know he was connected with that paper. What then? What has Miss Brewster to do with Rivers?"

"She is one of the Argus staff, too." "George Wentworth, you don't mean to tell me that!"

"And is she here to find out about the mine?"

"Exactly. She was put on the job after Rivers had failed."

"George!" said Kenyon, suddenly dropping his companion's arm, and fac-ing him. "What have you told her?" "There is the misery of it. I have told her everything." "My dear fellow, how could you be-"

"Oh, I know-I know. I know everything you would say. Everything you can say I have said to myself, and ten times more and ten times worse. There is nothing you can say of me more bitter than what I think about myself." "Did you tell her anything about my report?"

"I told her everything, everything! Do you understand? She is going to telegraph from Queenstown the full essence of our reports-of both our re-

"Heavens! This is fearful. Is there no way you would try to prevent her

"If you think you can prevent her wish you would try it."

"How did you find it out? Did she tell you?"

"Oh, it doesn't matter how I found it out. I did find it out. A man told me who she was; then I asked her, and she was perfectly frank about it. She read me the report even." "Read it to you?"

"Yes, read it to me, and punctuated it in my presence—put in some words that I suggested as being better than those she had used. Oh, it was the coolest piece of work you ever saw."

"But there must be some way of preventing her getting that account to New York in time. You see, all we have to do is to wire your people to hand in our report to the directors, and then her report is forestalled. She has to telegraph from a British office, and it seems to me that we could stop her in some way."

"As for instance, how?" "Oh, I don't know just how at the moment, but we ought to be able to do it. If it was a man we could have him arrested as a dynamiter or some thing; but a woman, of course, is more difficult to deal with. George, I would appeal to her better nature if I were Wentworth laughed sneeringly.

"Better nature?" he said. "She hasn't any; and that is not the worst of it. She has 'calculated,' as she calls it, all the possibilities in the affair; she 'calculates' that we will reach Queens-town about Saturday night. If we do, she will get her report through in time to be published on Sunday in the New York Argus. If that is the case, then see where our telegram will be. We telegraph our people to send in the report. It reaches the office Saturday night, and is not read. The office closes at two o'clock; but even if they got it, and understood the urgency of the matter, they could not place the papers before the directors until Monday morning, and by Monday morning it will be in the London financial sheets." "George, that woman is a fiend."

"No, she isn't, John. She is merely clever American journalist, who thinks she has done a very clever good piece of work indeed, and who, through the stupidity of one man, has succeeded, that's all."

"Have you made any appeal to her

"Oh, haven't I? Of course I have. What good did it do? She merely laughed at me. Don't you understand? That is what she is here for. Her whole voyage is for that one purpose; and it's not likely the woman is going to forego her triumph after having succeeded-more especially as some body else in the same office has failed. That's what gives additional zest to what she has done. The fact that Rivers has failed and she has succeeded, seems to be the great feather in her

"Then," said Kenyon, "I am going to appeal to Miss Brewster myself." "Very well. I wish you joy of your job. Do what you can, John, there's a good fellow. Meanwhile I want to be alone somewhere."

Wentworth went down the stairway that led to the steerage department, and for a few moments sat among the steerage passengers. Then he climbed up another ladder, and got to the very front of the ship. Here he sat down on a coil of rope and thought over the situation. Thinking, however, did him very little good. He realized that even if he got kold of the paper Miss Brewster had, she could easily write out another. She had the facts in her head, and all she needed to do was to get to a telegraph office, and there write out her message.

Meanwhile Kenyon took a few turns up and down the deck thinking deeply on the same subject. He passed over to the side where Miss Brewster sat, but on coming opposite her had not the courage to take his place beside her. She was calmly reading her book. Three times he came opposite her, paused for a moment, and then continued his hopeless march. He saw that his courage was not going to be sufficient for the task, and yet felt the task must be accomplished. He didn't know how to begin. He didn't know what inducement to offer the young woman for foregoing the fruits of her ingenuity. He felt that this was the weak point in his armor. The third time he paused in front of Miss Brewster, she looked up and motioned him to the chair beside her, saying:

"I don't know you very well, Mr. Kenyon, but I know who you are. Won't you sit down beside me for a few moments?" The bewildered man sat down on the chair she indicated

"Now, Mr. Kenyon, I know just what is troubling you. You have passed three or four times wishing to sit down beside me and yet afraid to venture. Is that not true?"

"Quite true." "I knew it was. Now I know also what you have come for. Mr. Wentworth has told you what the trouble is. He has told you that he has given me all the particulars about the mines, hasn't he?

"He has." "And he has gone off to his state room to think over the matter, and has left the affair in your hands, and you imagine you can come here to me, and, perhaps, talk me out of sending that dispatch to the Argus. Isn't that your motive?" "That is about what I hope to be able to do," said Kenyon, mopping his brow. "Well, I thought I might just as well put you out of your misery at once. You take things very seriously, Mr. Kenyon, I can see that. Now, don't

"I'm afraid I do." "Why, of course you do. The publication of this, as I told Mr. Wentworth, will really not matter at all. It will not be any reflection on either of you, because your freinds will be sure that if you had known to whom you were talking, you would never have said mything about the mines."

Kenyon smiled grimly at this piece of comfort. "Now, I have been thinking about something since Mr. Wentworth went away. I am really very sorry for him.

am more sorry than I can tell."
"Then," said John, "won't you—" "No, I won't, so we needn't recur to that phase of the subject. That is what I am here for, and, no matter what you say, the dispatch is going to be sent. Now, it is better to understand that at first, and then it will create no trouble afterwards. Don't you think that is the best?"

"Probably," answered the wretched

"Well, then, let us start there. I will say in the cablegram that the information comes from neither Mr. Kenyon nor Mr. Wentworth." "Yes but that wouldn't be true."

"Why, of course it wouldn't be true but that doesn't matter, does it?" "Well, on our side of the water," said Kenyon, "we think that the truth

Miss Brewster laughed heartily. "Dear me," she said, "what little tact you have. How does it concern you whether it is true or not? If there is any falsehood it is not you who tells it, so you are free from all blame. Indeed you are free from all blame, anyhow, in this affair; it is all your friend Wentworth's fault; but still, if it hadn't been Wentworth, it would have been

Kenyon looked up at her incredulous

"Oh yes, it would," she said, nodding confidently at him. "You must not flatter yourself because Mr. Wentworth told me everything about it, that you wouldn't have done just the sume, if I had to find it out from you. All men are pretty much alike where women are concerned."

"Can I say nothing to you, Miss Brewster, which will keep you from sending the message to America?" "No, you cannot. I thought we had settled that at the beginning. I see there is no use talking to you. I will return to my book, which is very interesting. Good morning, Mr. Kenyon.' Kenyon felt the hopelessness of his project quite as much as Wentworth had done, and, thrusting his bands deep into his pockets, he wandered disconsolately up and down the deck. As he went to the other side of the deck he met Miss Longworth walking alone. She smiled a cordial welcome to him, so he turned and changed his step to suit her. "May I walk with you a few minutes?" he said. "Certainly," was the reply. "What is the matter? You are looking very unhappy." "My comrade and myself are in great trouble, and I thought I would like to talk with you about it." "I am sure if there is anything I can do to help you I shall be most glad to do it." "Perhaps you may suggest some-thing. You see two men dealing with one woman are perfectly helpless." "Ah, who is the one woman-not I,

"No, not you, Miss Longworth. I wish it were, then we would have no trouble."

"Oh, thank you." "You see it is like this: When we were in Quebec-I think I told you about that—the New York Argus sent a man to find out what we had reported, or were going to report, to the London syndicate." "Yes, you told me that."

"Rivers was his name. Well, this same paper, finding that Rivers had failed, after having stolen the documents, has tried a much more subtle scheme, which promises to be much more successful. They have put on board this ship a young woman, who has gained a reputation for learning secrets not intended for the public. This young woman is Miss Brewster, who sits next to Wentworth at the table. Fate seems to have played right into her hand and placed her beside him. They became acquainted, and, unfortunately, my friend has told her a great deal about the mines, which she seemed to have an interest in. Or, rather, she pretended to have an interest in him, and so he spoke, being of course, off his guard. There is no

a lady will ever appear in a newspaper." "Naturally not." "Very well, that is the state of things In some manner Wentworth came to know that this young woman was the special correspondent of the New York Argus. He spoke to her about it, and she is perfectly frank in saying she is here solely for the purpose of finding out what the reports will be, and that the moment she gets to Queenstown she will cable what she has discovered to New York.

To give some idea of the profitableness of ruising vegetables and fruit, we will mention that only recently the large truck-farms in the vicinity of one of our large cities were inspected by a committee to examine into this industry and they reported that one farm of 40 acres yielded annually $16,000 worth of fruits and vegetables; another of six icres yielded $6,000: another of 90 acres returned $20,000, and another of 2) neres returned $8,000. The perpetuity in place is mainly brought about by the incumbents in offices, by a coalition and has now given us a Hill ring not less audacious and detestable than the former Democratic one, which became so odious to the people that its desired down fall added materially to the advancement of this county to the Republican fold, and now in a very few years we witness the same unhealthy combination made by the suckers of official pap of our own party to the disgust of the quiet element of the Republicans. Let us look the field over and see the raving for retention of place, and where ustoms of party are thrown to the winds Our noble band of Legislators have all felt after representing us the customary length of time, that their positions were personal property, with the exception of Kratz who by rule is entitled to another

On the list of place holders who are working for new or retention of old offices are the following: The entire old Legislature group I un ierstand; Samuel E. Nyce, the present Prothonotary and for many years deputy; Joseph C. Crawford, for a second term as Register; E. E. Elsenhans for the same office, after having been an office holder for about a decade; Harry W. Akins for Clerk, the number of years of his services in minor positions unknown to me; W. H. Murphey for Recorder-for the past term the deputy in office; this looks as though it would simply be a change of position the deputy becoming the chief and the chief becoming deputy, if so, it is certainly a very slick method of "holding on"

Just how the entire deal is being made ery, owned by William Bromer, of of course is unknown to me, but it looks Schwenksville, and managed by Peter as in the event of Elsenhans becoming least nine years is to be jumped up as Commissioners Clerk, where Stewart is to
